AWAITING RETURN OF HARRY HOPKINS

Not Certain Whether He Will Return Home By Way of China

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—President Roosevelt asserted today that Russia's resistance to the Axis war machine was "magnificent" and "frankly better than any military expert in Germany thought it would be."

That was his reply at a press conference—he authorized direct quotes—to an inquiry on what he thought of Russian resistance to date. He said:

"It is magnificent and frankly better than any military expert in Germany thought it would be."

Hitler Mentioned
When a reporter, referring to Adolf Hitler asked whether Mr. Roosevelt included Germany's outstanding military expert among those surprised at Russian resistance, the President suggested that newsmen not spoil the story.

A laugh was his only response to another question—whether Germany had been doing some tail lying. The chief executive said that Russia did not come under terms of the lease-lend bill and he saw no prospect that she would. The reason, he said, is that Russia is able to pay for the purchase in this country of war equipment to be tossed into the battle against Germany.

No decision may be expected on an additional lease-lend appropriation, the chief executive asserted, until Harry L. Hopkins returns to the country. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor, now is in Moscow, after having visited London.

Mr. Roosevelt said the only word he had had from Hopkins since his arrival in the Russian capital was that he had got there safely.

Silent on Hopkins' Route
Mr. Roosevelt might not say whether Hopkins would return by way of China.

Mr. Roosevelt had no comment on a suggestion that July had seen a definite turn in the war, with Russian resistance stiffening. Nor did he have anything to say on conditions in the Far East or on shipments of oil to Japan. He said, also, he had heard nothing of the possibility of lease-lend aid to the Free French allies of Britain.

The President did say that he hoped to get away early next week and go up the coast somewhere where at least the nights would be cool. He said he wanted a week off.

Driver Is Acquitted

Carl M. Dietrich, 42, of Atwater, former Stark county deputy sheriff, and one-time Alliance police officer, was exonerated Thursday on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Municipal Judge Harry Moreland dismissed the case.

Sugar-Buying Spree, Sending Prices Flying, May Backfire On Hoarders, Warn Officials

U. S. May Repeat Action of 1939, Removing All Import and Market Restrictions To Knock Out Speculation

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Apparently fearful that the war may cause shortages, American consumers have engaged in another sugar-hoarding spree but it may backfire on them.

Despite government assurances that supplies were ample, officials said today that housewives, candymakers, manufacturers of other products requiring sugar, wholesalers and retailers have bought sugar at a record-breaking rate this year to build up reserve stocks for use in case of a scarcity or stratosphere prices.

This heavy buying activity had one natural result—a sharp rise in prices. Today these prices are the highest since the war's start in 1939, when a similar epidemic of hoarding led the government to take drastic action to check the advance. Raw sugar is being quoted at about $3.60, duty-paid basis, per hundred pounds at New York.

Agriculture department officials consider present quotations excessive.

Under a sugar control law, the agriculture department has the power to say how much sugar may be marketed in this country in any year, and to divide this quantity among various producing areas under a quota system. By increasing or reducing the quotas, it usually is able to influence prices.

When it became evident that consumers were buying far beyond their current needs, the department increased the quotas three times. It hoped this action would halt the advance.

The department figured wrong. Prices kept going up. Obviously anxious to avoid speculative prices, officials said the government might have to repeat action taken in 1939. At that time President Roosevelt suspended the quota system, thereby removing all import and marketing restrictions.

Fears of shortage have been founded on the fact that the United States depends upon offshore areas for more than two-thirds of its requirements, and the possibility that war-shipping losses might interfere with movement of those supplies. The agriculture department has issued statements discounting this possibility.

JAPS DEMAND SUPPLIES AND BASES IN SIAM

Ask Control of Country's Rubber, Rice and Tin Production

NO ALTERNATIVE
FOR SIAMESE SEEN

Complete Occupation May Isolate Singapore from Land Assistance

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Aug. 1.—Japan has demanded military bases in Thailand (Siam) and control of that country's rubber, rice and tin production, it was reported authoritatively here today. Japan was said to have offered in exchange restoration of the province of Laos and the ancient city of Angkor, both in Japanese-dominated French Indo-China.

It was believed in London that Thailand's only alternative to granting bases would be forcible Japanese occupation of them.

(Tokyo announced today an agreement between Japan and Thailand under which Japan gained a large credit for purchases in Thailand, mostly rice, it is presumed.)

Thailand lies partly on the Malay peninsula, which is tipped by Britain's Singapore fortress, and shares the peninsula for a stretch between Burma and Singapore.

Since Thailand extends to within 400 miles of Singapore the danger of such concessions, in the British view, is easily seen. By occupation of Thailand's part of the Malay peninsula, the Japanese could isolate Singapore from any assistance by land from Burma and India.

By creating bases on the western shore of the peninsula the Japanese could threaten Burma and India herself by air. There, however, Japanese planes would have to cross the broad Bay of Bengal to reach India proper.

The Royal Air Force has been strengthened in Burma, the air ministry announced, with construction of airdromes "for both offensive and defensive actions."

Considerable reinforcements were said to be arriving in the British Oriental country, including numbers of American-made Buffalo planes.

Wettest July In Half Century Listed By Observer Copeland

Ground Soaks Up More Than 10 Inches of Rainfall; July of 1936, Was Hottest

Last month, a period of exceptionally warm weather, was the wettest July on record, with a total precipitation of 10.17 inches, District Weather Observer L. H. Copeland said today.

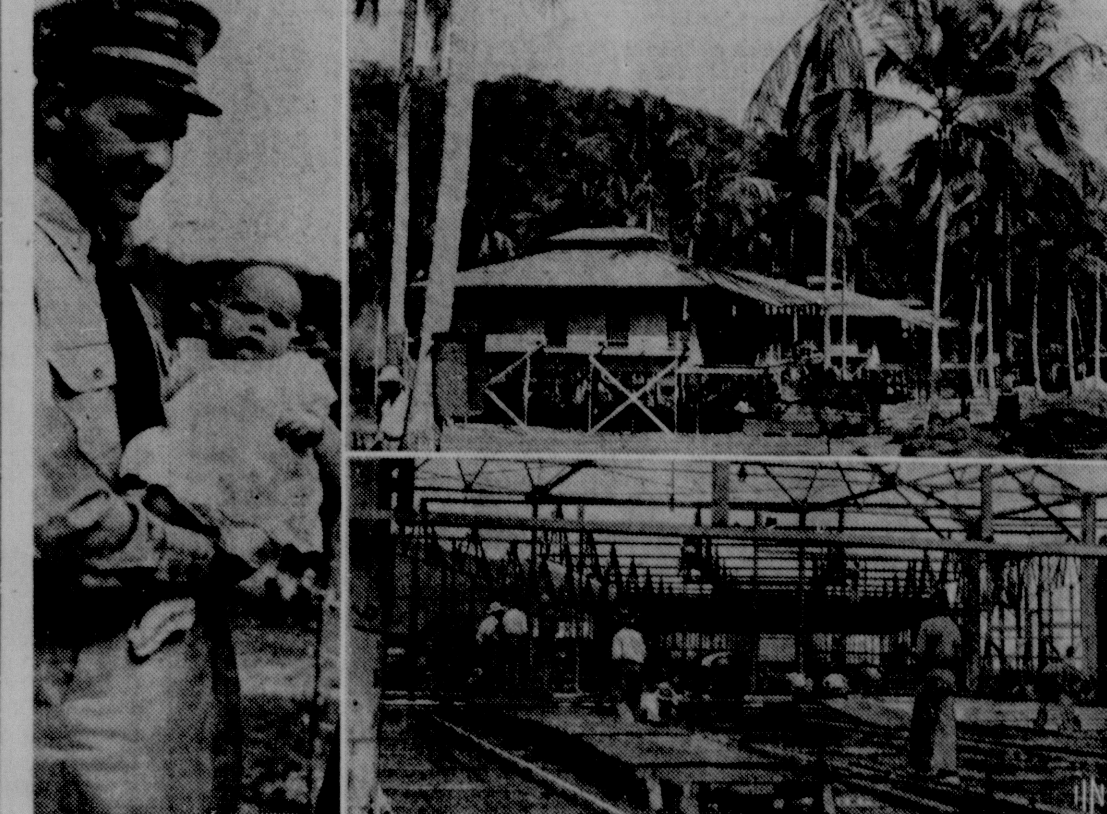

It was the first time in the 49 years that district weather records have been kept that any one month had 10 or more inches of rainfall. The year 1924 experienced the driest July, with only 1.41 inches precipitation.

Four big rains came last month. On July 12, a 3.29-inch downpour was measured, 42 inch on the 15th, three inches on the 18th and 1.55 last Tuesday, according to the observer's chart.

Water Table Up
The underground water table is the highest since 1939 when 9.57 inches of precipitation were recorded. Total rainfall for the year is 23.94 inches, 57 above normal.

Columbiana county areas suffered flood damage in the July 18 down-pour. Total rainfall in July of last year was 4.33 inches, practically seven

REPORT NAZI PUSH STALLED

Reds Say They're Holding;
Hopkins Confident of Hitler Defeat

(By Associated Press)
Adolf Hitler's invasion armies were pictured in London reports today as stalled along the whole 2,000-mile Soviet war front during the past 24 hours and near the point of exhaustion, and in Moscow, Harry L. Hopkins expressed "even more confidence that Hitler is going to lose."

From the German fuhrer's headquarters came another communique of extreme brevity, barren of any detail:

"Battles on the east front continue to develop in our favor."

"Warplanes last night bombarded military objectives in Moscow."

In Berlin, Nazi editors countered assertions that the German offensive had bogged down with a "wait and see" attitude. Again they stressed that it was more important to destroy Russia's armies than to win ground.

Authoritative quarters in London declared there was "absolutely no indication" the fall of Leningrad or a Soviet defeat on the vital central front at Smolensk were imminent.

Aside from its 19-word summary of the battle with Russia, Hitler's high command emphasized over-night activities of the luftwaffe, noting attacks on Moscow, the Suez canal, the British east and south coasts and shipping in English waters.

LISBON PRIMARY INTEREST LIGHT

Only Contests for Mayor,
Council, Listed In All-
Republican Voting

LISBON, Aug. 1.—Very little interest is being shown here in the approaching Republican primary on Aug. 12, contests listed only for mayor and council.

Mayor G. C. Rauch will be opposed for the mayoralty nomination by Clyde V. Hadley, while Henry T. Dawes and Bruce Kessler, newcomers to the political field, are seeking nominations to council, opposing the six incumbents.

There will be no Democratic slate at the primaries, as no candidates filed.

Mayor Rauch, insurance and real estate operator, who is seeking the nomination for his sixth term, is opposed by Hadley, local garage owner and operator for many years, former president of the Chamber of commerce, and one time candidate for county commissioner.

Dawes, who is seeking one of six councilmanic nominations, is an accountant at the plant of the National Brass & Copper Co., and Kessler is a potter. Councilmen who are seeking nomination for re-election, are:

Harry Arter, proprietor of a harness and leather goods store, seeking a fourth term.

Clarence Ball, pottery foreman, who is seeking nomination for a sixth term as councilman.

Edward Heim, who is seeking his third term in council, is a member of the Heim & Heim plumbing and heating contractors.

William Virden, state highway employee, Charles Van Poyssan, retired farmer and highway employee, and L. H. Johnson, photographer and former commissioner's clerk, are each seeking their second terms in council.

The unopposed village officials who are seeking nominations are: Kenneth Hiseco, grocery clerk, who is seeking his fourth term as village clerk.

Mrs. Helen Blackburn, deputy registrar of motor vehicles, who is also seeking her fourth term as village treasurer.

The members of the board of public affairs, unopposed, are: William M. Morgan, pharmacist, who is seeking his seventh term on the board which controls the water department and the village cemetery.

John Vogan, railroad worker, asking his fifth term as a board member.

Robert T. Morris, grocer, seeking his third term.

FOOD STAMPS ACTIVE TODAY

Clients Scheduled to Get Stickers Within Next
Two or Three Days

LISBON, Aug. 1.—The food stamp plan became active in the county relief area and in Salem and East Palestine today, completing the setup for the entire county. Relief clients will receive their stamps within the next two or three days.

H. A. Moore, county stamp agent, announced today.

All of the public assistance units in the county have certified their cases in vouchers which are exchanged for food stamps, with the exception of the aid for the aged organization which is expected to make its certification before Aug. 15.

Moore said there are many cases in the county where the family participates in two or more forms of relief, and are known as composite cases. They are required to purchase stamps to the extent of the combined food budgets of each category, whether it be aid for the aged, blind pension, aid for dependent children, or WPA supplementation in direct relief.

Should a family receive a $2 city or county relief voucher, and if there happened to be a member of that family receiving aid for the assistance, the latter client would be required to purchase a $2 relief voucher by purchasing $4 worth of food stamps as that is the amount set up for the aid for the aged food budget for a half month period.

With the $2 voucher and the $4 in cash this family is then issued $6 worth of orange stamps and receives $3 worth of free blue stamps which may be used in the purchase of surplus commodities designated each month by the Federal Surplus Marketing Administration.

The stamps are accepted as cash at any of the 121 food stores in the county whose applications for participation in the stamp plan have been accepted by the Surplus Marketing Administration.

These include 44 markets in East Liverpool, 17 in Wellsville, 13 in Salem, 12 in East Palestine, 10 in Lisbon, 5 in Salineville, 4 in Leetonia, 3 in Hanover, 2 each in Columbiana, Negley, Power Point and Rogers, and one each in Damascus, East Rochester, Kensington, Signal and New Waterford.

Merchants may redeem stamps in $10 lots either from their wholesaler or direct from the SMA finance office in Cleveland.

REBUFS NAZI CALL TO SPURN PRO-AXIS LIST

Submits Evidence of Plan
To Co-operate With United States

ASSERTS SHE WILL
MAP OWN POLICIES

"Barefaced Impudence" Is Term U. S. Applies To German Action

(By Associated Press)
MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1.—Mexico, rejecting with a stern rebuke a German government request she protest President Roosevelt's black-list of pro-Axis firms here, provided tangible evidence today of her intention to cooperate with the United States in solving mutual problems created by the European war.

Mexico told Germany she regarded the request as not only impudent but threatening, and declared she would brook no interference in the formulation of her national policies.

She took exception particularly to the German assertion that "re-signed acceptance" of Washington's anti-Axis measures could not fail to influence the attitude of the Berlin government in renewing commercial relations with Mexico after the war.

This warning, declared Mexican Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla, "reveals by the sole fact of its being formulated a position of pressure, imperious and unjustifiable, which constitutes an open contradiction to the spirit of reciprocal respect which governs the foreign relations of the Mexican republic."

Rejection of the German request constituted the second rebuff Mexico has delivered to the reich government within four months. In April President Manuel Avila Camacho's administration rejected a protest against expropriation of German ships in Mexican ports.

The German request on the Washington blacklist and Mexico's answer were disclosed last night with the publication of notes exchanged between Padilla and the Nazi minister, Rudt von Collenberg.

"Barefaced Impudence"
WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, accused Germany today of barefaced impudence in urging Mexico to protest to the United States over the blacklisting of Latin-American firms catalogued as pro-Axis.

Welles asserted that the German government had violated and destroyed the sovereignty of many countries.

Therefore, he said, it was nothing more or less than barefaced impudence for Germany to try to tell Mexico or any other country what it should do to protect its sovereign rights.

Moreover, he declared that Mexico did not require any advice from Germany.

Welles made this press conference comment on the action of Mexico in strongly rejecting a German request that it protest the United States' action of blacklisting hundred of firms in Latin-America deemed to be operating for the benefit of the Axis.

SITTING ON THE BULGE

Away back in 1932 and 1933 when economic theorists were wracking their brains to produce a little inflation, the wiser of them were looking ahead to the problem of keeping inflation under control when it happened.

"They used an expression, 'sitting on the bulge.' They meant that when the price indexgraph began to bulge sharply upward it should be restrained by government action, instead of being allowed to soar off into nebular space.

In this way, they reasoned, another devastating deflation, and depression might be averted. It was a reasonable theory and it has come to light again now in President Roosevelt's request for price and rent control legislation.

Whether or not it is a workable theory is, of course, problematic. It never has been tried. In order to give it a successful trial, moreover, there would need to be established a measure of government control never approached in the United States before.

When President Roosevelt emphasizes the joint responsibility of management and labor for holding down exorbitant prices and wages resulting from the argument boom, he recognizes one source of inflation hitherto winked at by the government. The Roosevelt administration's policies have made it easy, instead of difficult, for organized labor to win higher wages. If those policies now are to be revised for labor's own benefit—because inflation works greatest injury to the purchasing power of wage earners—it is an important decision. Proof of the pudding in this matter, as in all other moves to hold down inflation, must wait on evidence that intentions are going to be backed up by enforcement.

There can be no reasonable doubt whatever that popular morale would be bolstered by genuinely effectual efforts to restrain runaway inflation. It is the most discussed, the most feared, the most planned for eventuality of the times. There is universal dread of the morning-after effect of another boom like the one that left the country limp and depressed at the beginning of the last decade.

MUCH BETTER, GENTLEMEN

War Secretary Stimson's apology to Sen. Wheeler for saying he had done something "near treason" because some soldiers received American First committee literature distributed under the senator's franking privilege, will be applauded by all Americans who are trying to keep their heads.

Secretary Stimson was angry when he made the charge. He had been made angry by Sen. Wheeler and his friends who were, in town, peeved by Mr. Stimson. It was one of those silly situations where everybody starts swinging, not caring much what started the fight but determined to get even.

Sen. Wheeler was within his rights in telling the public what he thought. The American First committee was within its rights in telling the people what other "isolationists" thought. There was no deliberate attempt to circularize soldiers, but it is hard to see what bearing that has on the issue. As Sen. Wheeler said in the senate, "If it is near treason to send out those cards, then every speech against war that is made by any senator on the floor of the senate and published in a newspaper makes him guilty of near treason. If any man over the radio makes a speech saying that we ought to keep out of war, and the speech happens to be heard by some man in an army camp, or read in a newspaper, then in Mr. Stimson's opinion the speaker is guilty of near treason."

Secretary Stimson wisely has retreated from so untenable a position. The issue can be closed, as far as Sen. Wheeler is concerned. Meanwhile, the public would be further encouraged if its congressmen were to say explicitly that it is contrary to public policy to turn over their franking privilege to organizations using commercial mailing lists. As long as Sen. Wheeler, himself, admits he had no idea who was getting the mail being distributed under his name, that seems to be the important question that needs settling now that the personal acrimony has blown over.

THOSE RUSSIAN COMMUNIKES

On the record, the German army's communiques have been reasonably trustworthy. The air force and the navy's communiques have not been trustworthy. Therefore, unless it is assumed that the army's communiques from the western front are being handled differently than they were in previous campaigns in the war, reports of German progress against the Russians deserve to be taken seriously.

The communiqué follower's guessing process is being complicated by Russian communiques, which are an unknown quantity. Instead of using the evasive language of Germany's other blitzkrieg victims when they were being pushed steadily backward and destroyed piecemeal, the Russian communiques speak of stopping the German army in some quarters and even of counter-attacks driving the Germans backward from the positions they have gained.

It is confusing. But as one seasoned communiqué reader puts it, with a dash of humor to bring out the flavor of his personal confusion, "Either we will find out that the Russians were lying and the Germans will be undisputed top dog, or we will find out that the Germans were lying and the Russians are top dog. In either event, we won't have anything to be happy about."

OBSERVING A TRADITION

Back in quieter times when men wandered what would happen to the dictators, instead of wondering what would happen to themselves, as they're doing now, it was customary on the birthdays of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin—also in between birthdays—to write an editorial something like this:

The Achilles heel of dictatorship is its inability to perpetuate itself by orderly means. A monarchy does this by a blood line of success. A republic does it by provision in advance for a well defined legal procedure. But a dictatorship can do it only by edict, which is likely to be of slight consequence when the dictator dies because his political power is personal and arbitrary, based usually on nothing but his own ability to repress all opposition to his regime. In brief, what happens when a dictator dies? Until that question has been answered, dictatorship has only the aspect of a political expedient and is of no permanent consequence as a form of government.

Benito Mussolini has just passed his 58th birthday. Hitler is 52, and Stalin is 62. A curious world still wonders what is going to happen when any or all of the three I-am-the-law leaders cannot be the law any more. It is a question that still cries out for an answer.

THE STARS SAY:

For Saturday, August 2

EXCEPTIONALLY propitious astral forces are found to dominate on this day, holding promise for all sorts of advancements, favors, honors, public acclaim. It should be a time for pushing to the goal of heart's desire, in both public and private ambitions, and with financial expansion, social popularity, public friendships and prestige assured.

Those whose birthday it is may hit the high mark of achievement, preferment, expansion and growth, in whatever direction the forces of talent, desire and inclination may lead. This in business, cultural, social, public and financial aspiration, with the assistance and friendly recognition of those in high places to be counted upon. The elements of "luck" as well as pluck and personal prestige are considerable and to be utilized if not carried to excess.

A child born on this day should be not only assisted and elevated by Lady Luck, but its cherished hopes and wishes may be spurred by efficiency, sound character and logical ambitions.

By perfecting an airplane silencer a California habitual criminal hopes to silence the prosecution.

BRAIN GIVES MAN HIS SUPERIORITY

Has More Than His Ancestors, Says Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Just why is man superior to the lower animals? The answer is apparently very pat. Because of his brain. There is no question that he has more and better brains than his ancestors.

The earliest man, the Java man, had a brain of 855 c.c.m. The Pitman man had a brain of 1300 c.c.m. The average modern man has a brain of 1400 to 1500 c.c.m.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

But the mere question of weight and size is not sufficient to explain the differences to which I refer. Some anthropologists do not believe that brain weight is a necessary index to brain capacity. There are differences in the sizes of the different parts of the brain between man and the lower animals.

It will not do to say that man is superior to the brutes because his brain thinks. That is only a superficial reply. The brain needs material to think with just as much as a loom needs thread to weave cloth. What is the material? Professor Eliot Smith believes that it lies on the sensory side—that, particularly, binocular vision raises man above the beasts. A bird, a horse, probably a dog, sees only with one eye directly in front of that eye—it cannot grasp distance, perspective, the stereoscopic view of binocular vision—its world is flat.

Dr. Tilney's Theory
Dr. Frederick Tilney, the great comparative anatomist, believes, on the other hand, that man's brain is superior because he possesses neokinesis—a new potentiality to make movements.

"From first to last," he says, "it has been the achievements of his hands which have carried man onward from the time when he began to work with the simplest of stone implements."

With the development of all the motor tracts and masses of gray nuclei which constitute the connections necessary for the fine coordinate movements of the hand, the impulses which come to consciousness from these sources make up an entirely different mind from that of any other animal.

Dog Talks With His Tail

A dog, for instance, makes most of the movements expressive of emotions with his tail; he waves it happily in greeting and hangs it dejectedly in sickness and sorrow. All his emotional movements are tail movements. And of a consequence his entire world is completely different from that of a tailless animal. So that clever, deft, quick instrument, the hand, which its owner is able to move so accurately as to pluck a mote from the point of a needle—this according to Dr. Tilney, has lifted us above the lower animals.

Razor Shaved Grant

OUR READERS

COMMENTS ON WAR

Editor, The News:
I was so much interested in a speech given before a mass-meeting held under the auspices of We, the Mothers, Mobilize for America, Inc., in Chicago recently that I am quoting some of the highlights in the hope that perhaps the readers of the Salem News will be equally as much interested. Mrs. Lyrl Clark Van Hynning, vice president of the above organization, spoke in part as follows:

"If we go into this war, for which we have no stomach and no logical excuse, we are destroying not only for ourselves but for all little nations the hope of ultimate freedom. In the first place it is an aggressors' war. Great Britain has not lost a foot of her empire. On the contrary, she has added to it. A republic cannot fight on the aggressive and be true to herself. We would be fighting to put the chains of Communism, the Russian Empire, more firmly around the necks of small would-be democracies—Latvia, Estonia, Lithuania, Finland. In the second place, what would we be fighting for? We do not need more territories, we do not want to impose on free peoples, we do not want to uphold imperialism and bolshevism. Why not be a George Washington kind of realist? He said, 'Why quit our own to stand on foreign shores? Why give up our God-given natural barriers and put ourselves in the power of the enemy? Isn't our homely old slogan better 'Come and get us, if you can?'"

"Ah! but they tell us a free United States cannot live in a dictator controlled world. Possibly, they (the realists) said that to George Washington and his ragged, barefoot men. But they didn't believe such 'realists'—they defied the entire might of the greatest empire in the world, plus her hired Hessians—they had an intrepid leader . . .

"The only time we have fallen for this twaddle was in 1917 when we took the English propaganda seriously and were afraid of the Kaiser and his Hun. We took the side of our ancient enemy. He routed us out of our house to save his; we sacrificed our peace of mind, the flower of our youth. We spent our fighting equipment and loaned this 'good neighbor' seven billion dollars. In return we received the animosity of the world, were called 'Uncle Shylock,' etc., and this same 'good neighbor' told us to our teeth that we by our interference had brought on the present chaotic condition.

"Those who are shouting for war, who are they? You, plain American citizen, who has to pay for all these wild orgies, owe it to yourself to inquire, who are the interventionists? They are the same ones who stirred up the last war—munitions makers, international bankers who brag that they financed the Russian Revolution, kings and nobility who leave their people to do the fighting. Are you willing that your fine lad sacrifice his life, his service to his own country to put a rotter like Caro' back on the throne of Roumania?"

"They say we are in the war! Whose war? Has an enemy declared war upon us? Has an enemy 'stabbed our backs?' Has an enemy 'impressed our seamen?' Has an enemy (except Britain) interfered with our mails? Why is our fate so inevitably linked with Great Britain? Did she ask us when she declared war on Germany? We Americans like a good clean fight but we don't want any more of England's second-hand brags—only to be left holding the bag as we were before.

"Within the memory of war age boys, we fought and paid for a 'war to save democracy,' we fought and died for a war to end all wars'. Let us now demand payment. Our whole duty as individual citizens in a representative republic is to demand that our hired servant keep the promise by which he secured his job: 'Our boys shall not be sent to foreign soil'. As you assure the keeping of that solemn pledge, do you stand vindicated or convicted?"

"It is a big job, mothers, but it follows the teachings of history. God chooses not the mighty but the humble; not the great but the meek for his best jobs.

"The common people of America must demonstrate the moral courage essential to the preservation of free men. Sometimes it is difficult for the popular voice to make itself heard, especially so now, amidst the gibberish nonsense and villifying of hyphenated Americans who love Great Britain so much more than they do America. We are being heard and as we gather and join hands, we shall again be Americans worthy of the name—not afraid of any power or combination of powers as long as we stand together and on the side of God."

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—The $2,000,000,000 annual cost of industrial and occupational accidents could be cut in half by adequate safety precautions and health examinations, according to Dr. John P. Wood of Birmingham, Mich.

Theatre Attractions

A fast-paced well played comedy, "The Devil and Miss Jones" showing at the State tonight and Saturday brings Jean Arthur to the screen in one of her best comedy roles.

The story of a young couple who want to get married but can't because they haven't enough money is not new in movie stories, but add to that situation one disgruntled millionaire department store owner who gets a job as a salesman in his own store and you have the three major characters in the piece.

Things happen when the owner-salesman is taken to a secret meeting of employees, who are organizing to make wage and work demands, by the girl who believes him broke and lonely. He gets himself the girl and her employee-or-garbling sweetheart arrested, she gets them out and the sweetheart gets them arrested again.

Jean Arthur as the girl, Robert Cummings as her speech-making boy friend, Charles Coburn as the millionaire, Spring Byington as pretty little spinster the million-aire falls in love with, have the principal parts. Edmund Gwenn, S. Z. Sakall, William Demarest, Walter Kingsford, Montagu Love, and Irene Brewer are seen in supporting roles.

At the Grand Friday and Saturday are the Three Mesquites, Bob Livingston, Bob Steele and Rufe Davis in "Gangs of Sonora" and "The Medico of Painted Springs" featuring Charles Starrett and Terry Walker.

Kitten Hikes 18 Miles

CARTHAGE, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. James Dalton of Lewisburg thought they had settled all their problems when they sold their farm, gave away their kitten, and moved to a new home. Two days later they heard a meowing at the door and the kitten walked in gingerly on tender feet after an 18-mile hike.

Highest temperature recorded in the United States was 134 degrees at Death Valley, July 10, 1913.

Chain Letter Schemes Are Hit by Postoffice

The mails in all parts of the country are being flooded at the present time with letters relating to so-called endless chain schemes soliciting defense savings stamps, Postmaster A. E. Beardmore said today.

Patrons of the various postoffices who mail matter relating to schemes of this nature should be warned that the sending of such matter through the mails is a violation of the postal fraud and lottery statutes.

Notices are served upon persons participating in such schemes whose names come to the attention of the postoffice department requiring them to show cause why fraud orders should not be issued against them, he added. Such orders forbid the delivery of any mail to the persons named therein.

No Blacksmiths at Fort
FORT RILEY, Kas.—There wasn't a blacksmith among the thousands of young soldiers inducted into the army at Fort Riley. But the army has to have horses and horses have to have shoes. So a course for blacksmiths was started and more than 75 enlisted men were trained for three months in the technique of shoeing horses.

Wu Fong's Folly
COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia. — Wu
Fong, a chow dog, upset an automobile to qualify for the doghouse.
He lunged for a window to jump out and the car's driver, Dick Caughlin, lunged after him, losing control of the car which upset in a ditch. Neither Dick nor the dog was hurt but the auto was damaged.

He Was Speechless
MINNEAPOLIS—A bee reclining in the soft luxury of floss candy bit Ronnie Holmquist. The sting was right on the tongue which swelled so fast Holmquist had difficulty explaining his trouble.

Inland Waterways Increase In Importance To Defense

By OSCAR KATTAN
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 1.—The inland waterways, whose commercial re-birth began in the emergency of the World war, are achieving constantly increased importance in the transportation needs of the present emergency.

Between 50 and 60 companies, more than ever before, operate on the Mississippi, Ohio and other rivers of the 7,000-mile waterway system.

Tons, which are the freight trains of rivers and are equivalent to several hundred railroad freight cars, are hauling essential materials—sulphur and other chemicals, scrap iron, gasoline and oil, cotton, bauxite, coal and coke, steel and steel products, corn and wheat.

The Federal Barge Lines, government-owned corporation headed by Chester C. Thompson, is sharing in that business increase to the extent of about 50 per cent more traffic than last year. June was the best month in the company's history.

Increase General

The increase is general throughout the barge lines system, centering in St. Louis and spreading by way of the Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Warrior rivers to Minneapolis and St. Paul, Kansas City, Chicago, New Orleans, Mobile and Birmingham.

Wheat and storage corn moving from the midwestern granary, bulk sulphur coming from New Orleans and Texas, Illinois coal moving to upstream industry, bauxite for East St. Louis, and hundreds of other commodities are contributing to the mounting tonnage.

In the first 26 weeks of the river season, general merchandise handled by the barge lines totaled 100,000 tons more than the same period of 1940.

On the Ohio, where the government-owned company does not operate, lock men have reported river traffic running a third above last year. From four to 21 tons a day have been passing up the river, some with 25 to 30 barges.

They are hauling fluorspar from Illinois and Kentucky and scrap iron to Pittsburgh steel mills; cotton, chemicals and gravel to the Charleston, Ind., powder plant and gasoline and oil to the industrial east.

Gasoline and oil shipments have increased above last year. Oil companies and a dozen private owners operate fleets of tanker barges.

Near New Records

The United States district engineer's office said that barge traffic on the Ohio and Monongahela rivers was pushing to the highest tonnage in history.

In the first six months of this year, the Monongahela, coal chute from the fields of West Virginia and Pennsylvania to the Pittsburgh steel center, carried 14,245,600 tons as compared with 12,457,600 tons in the same time last year.

The Ohio river in the Pittsburgh district alone bore 8,259,400 tons for the six months against 6,604,200 tons.

Barges in the Mississippi above the Illinois river carried total freight of 869,679 tons in the half-year, as compared with 612,904 tons up to June 30, 1940. A great part of the increase was represented by petroleum products, which went from 163,726 tons to 359,412 tons.

The Illinois waterway, from the Mississippi to the Great Lakes, handled 1,963,786 tons, including 1,075,002 tons of coal and 266,687 tons of gasoline and oil. In the same six months last year, it carried 1,150,505 tons, including 847-314 tons of coal and 118,537 tons of petroleum products.

HUNTINGTON, Ind.—Occasionally Henry Hite would call in the neighbors to see the project on which he was working in his cellar. However, he warned them it was a secret, and they must not tell. But now the secret is out, because the 84-year-old Hite is dead. He was buried in his "secret"—a walnut casket of his own making.

Saxons And Driscollwood Score Lopsided Class A Wins

TRADES CLASS IS DOWNED 16-1 AND FURNACERS, 21-2

Uneven Games Start Final Round of Softball League

The Saxons and Driscollwood took the high road last night and the Furnace and Trades Class took the low road. And there were miles between them.

The winning teams collected a combined total of 37 runs to a gross of three for the losers, to get the third and final round of softball off to a lopsided start.

In the first game, the unpredictable Saxons crushed the Trades Class 16-1 behind the four-hit bombing of Pauline. Mike Linder sparked the rout with three hits and five runs in five trips to the plate. Each team played with only eight men.

In the closing game, Greenisen, Phillips, and Hall pounded out home runs to lead the Driscollwood triumph over the Electric Furnace, 21-2. The two Furnace runs were scored in the fourth when Heston poked out a home run with Tullis on base.

Phillips allowed only two safe hits in the contest. McGhee scored four times on three hits and a walk to lead the leading batters. Only one Driscoll batter failed to share in the 17 hits handed out.

Church League

The Presbyterians upset the Trinity last night in the crucial game that decided the winner of the second round of Class B softball. The well played junior league contest saw the Presbys take an early lead by scoring in the third and leading 1-0 until the final frame when McGaffick crossed the plate to deadlock the contest.

The Presbys rallied in the last half, however, to win by a one-run margin. Shue allowed the Trinity just four hits while his mates collected five from Knepp.

In the five-inning game between the Christians and St. Pauls, the Christians emerged the victors with a 15-10 score. Mayhew paced the winners with a home run as Brian and Hart drove out doubles.

TRICK ROPER TO APPEAR AT SUNDAY GAME

Ray Crowl, manager of the Sandy Valley Ranch, Minerva, will give an exhibition of trick and fancy roping and sharp-shooting as an added half-time feature at the Salem-North Hills polo game here Sunday. Crowl, who conducted the Sandy Valley rodeo on July 4-5-6, will ride his horse, "Ace-Hi", in Salem.

North Hills, a combination of the old Wexford and present North Hills teams, ended Salem's early-season winning streak in a previous game this year but Salem is expected to take the visitors when they play away from home. The match is a non-league tilt.

"You see how wrong you are about Ray, Nino," Marie cried. "Then it must have been earlier in the evening—or later that Nino saw him." Nino gave Tony an angry glance. "But he is quite definite about Ray's condition. I know how you feel, my darling. But isn't it much better for us all to have an intelligent explanation of such a sad accident?"

"You don't know how I feel, or you wouldn't talk this way," Marie said fiercely. "It's wicked. Trying to hurt and make a scandal of his memory. I'll never speak to anyone again who dares talk that way. You're horribly callous, Nino! I never dreamed you were like this!"

Tony turned his head aside. He didn't want either of them to see his expression.

Nino tried to retrieve his blunder. "We'll hush it up, my sweet. But you must be reasonable. It's not only what Fritz and Hoto say, but we have proofs of how it happened."

"I don't believe anything those men say." There was a sob in Marie's voice.
Tony longed to shoot his fist into Nino's handsome face. He had to put his hands in his pockets. It was for Marie's sake, he told himself; he couldn't risk a fight on the yacht, who would protect her if they got him before he reached Cannes and drove into decisive action?

Nino said, as if regretfully, "Ray must have left the stateroom, then while Worth was asleep." (Tony couldn't contradict that.) Nino continued, "The poor fellow managed to get up on the boat deck. And, blotto as he was, he tried to climb into the launch—perhaps to play a joke on us—to hide himself. He slipped and fell."

"What do you base that on?" Marie sounded less sure of herself, more forlorn. For Tony wasn't backing her up.

Nino said slowly, "We found a piece of his shirt caught in the davit, and there were marks of rubber soles on the rail where he lost his balance." The Marchese chose to believe that. He had made himself believe it. Nino hadn't actually told him otherwise. So he ended, with conviction, "Captain Buckner agrees that was what happened."

He waited. Marie said dully, not looking at Tony, "I think I will go down." Her face looked smaller, the fire gone out of it. "Goodnight, Tony," she said tonelessly.

In his relief and triumph, Nino started away, thinking her beside him. But she lingered because Tony had caught her arm. "Listen, Marie," Tony whispered, "Don't breathe a word until we are in Cannes. But I'm telling you, Ray was sober. I trust you to keep this quiet."

"Oh—oh, Tony!" the light flooded back to her face. "Thanks, Tony." Then she ran after Nino, her feet light on the deck.

Tony Worth stayed where he was, he wouldn't have gone back to that stateroom he had shared with Ray for the world. He couldn't have looked at Ray's things—the gay, striped dressing gown, the rumpled bed he had left in one of his brainstorms in the middle of the night. It would have been so like Ray suddenly to want to have it out with Fritz—or Hoto—no matter what the hour. No, Tony couldn't look at those things that were still alive from the human touch.

The sky paled in the east.... a canvas prepared for the rich palette from which colors were presently chosen to paint the dawn. Tony, absorbed in the coming beauty, didn't hear Captain Buckner approach. The gruff voice at his elbow startled.

"Got any ideas, Mr. Worth?" The captain removed his cap and mopped his brow, though the air was cool. He hadn't shaved, and the gray stubble roughened his chin. The sea-blue of his eyes was less clear, as if his mental barometer predicted storms. He nudged closer along the rail. "I tell you, Mr. Worth," he said, "I don't like it. I don't like any of it."

"Neither do I," Tony responded moodily. A tactful understanding held them silent. Tony broke silence. "I shouldn't ask you, Sir. But—do you trust your crew?"

Lines deepened from the captain's broad nose to his hard lip. "They are rats," he growled. "But my officers are good men."

Tony nodded, glancing over his shoulder. Hoto stood some paces away, in front of Northheim's suite. His arms were folded in the sleeves of his dark kimono. He seemed lost in oriental meditation. Following the direction of Tony's eyes, Captain Buckner turned and scowled at the Japanese.

Tony murmured, "The Marchese tells me you're satisfied it was an accident."

The old captain, under his breath, ripped out a string of seaworthy oaths, expressing his opinion of the handsome young Marchese. When he had unloaded these, he muttered, "I wouldn't trust those apes on their Bible word. But I saw a bit of Mr. Sheldon's shirt, myself, stuck to the davit. And there's the print of his shoe, plain as daylight, on the rail. The man must have been the worse for liquor." Captain Buckner argued morosely with himself. "Demmit, Mr. Worth, there's no motive for anything else."

Tony yawned and stretched for Hoto's benefit. "That is the question, Captain," he said softly.

Captain Buckner gave him a short stare and stalked off. Hoto looked after the erect figure in blue serge with a barely visible smirk.

All that day, death rode as a guest on the Serena. It was in the eternal blue of sky and sea; in the pulse of the Diesels; in the sigh of wind ruffling the waters. It was even in the office of the suite where Felix Northheim sat, tugging savagely at his lower lip. For the late Ray Sheldon's alert little figure and gay, ageless face haunted the yacht.

Marie had asked Tony to pack Ray's personal belongings. They seemed still to be alive. In a little box hidden behind his shirts, Tony found the Croix de Guerre, and his throat constricted so that he could hardly swallow. Ray had never talked about that last war which hadn't taught anyone... much. But this French decoration explained him; explained perhaps the waste of years. He hadn't been wounded by shot or shells. He had been hurt more terribly elsewhere. And now he floated or sank somewhere in the Tyrrhenian Sea, instead of being buried in a poppy field. Tony gave the Croix de Guerre to Marie after she had left in one of his brainstorms in the middle of the night. It would have been so like Ray suddenly to want to have it out with Fritz—or Hoto—no matter what the hour. No, Tony couldn't look at those things that were still alive from the human touch.

The sky paled in the east.... a the short service conducted in the dining room by Captain Buckner. Marie went back to her suite, closing the door which connected it with Eve Pryne's room. She couldn't bear Eve's hysterics. She couldn't bear Nino Lippi's exquisite solicitude. His touch didn't comfort. His eyes didn't warm.

The room with its blue veneered walls, and its glazed blue hangings, was a shelter, but a shelter which flung back echoes of shallow laughter. Suddenly, Marie threw herself on the blue satin bed cover, and wept. In all her happy life, nothing had brought her up with such a shock as Ray Sheldon's death and the Croix de Guerre he had carried around all these years. She had been a baby when he won it. Or, course, she knew he had been over with Squadron A (converted later into machine gunners) and had seen action. But that was the one thing he never talked about.

Marie was tired of living, just now at least, in a colored, mental card she could animate at will. What good was all that money to her? She'd certainly give a lot of it away. But today she didn't feel confident about anything. Something had happened to her last night. Something had happened while she stood on the boat deck with Tony, watching the searchlight sweep the inky black June night. His arm around her then had seemed the only reality.

She lay still now on the bed, thinking of Nino Lippi; the way he had looked and talked, with Ray lost in the sea. And Tony had begged her to wait; to delay the wedding Nino had planned for Cannes.

Well, she wouldn't marry Nino! She couldn't possibly marry a man who had shown himself cold in the face of such a tragedy; who had been ready to allow Ray's drowning to appear as the result of drunkenness.... Tony Worth didn't believe Ray Sheldon was drunk.

At last Marie got up from the bed, and went over to the mirror on her dresser. She brushed her hair until it stood out like a burnished nimbus. Ray had said, once, "If you ever get around to meeting yourself, you'll be surprised." She knew now what he meant. She had been escaping the girl to whom those eyes belonged. She had been running away from herself....

Then Marie went up on deck to find the Marchese. He hovered, waiting for her, at the head of the stairs leading from the berth deck. Nino sprang forward, catching both her hands and kissing their upturned palms. "My own darling, I have been so anxious! I almost came down to your room. Your maid said you were resting after the service—was it not moving, that service? But it is now four o'clock."

"I want to talk to you, Nino," said Marie, disengaging her hands. His eyes were very green in the afternoon light, as he looked at her. She led the way past Northheim's suite to the after deck she called her "back porch." (That had been Ray's phrase for it, originally. Marie felt the lump again in her throat. At this hour Ray was usually tucked on the wicker lounge, sipping his first—or second Tom Collins.) Nino went to that lounge, as if there were no ghost there, and tried to pull her down beside him. "You must not be sad, carissima," he said gently. "Our life begins today. We shall be happy."

Marie looked at his narrow blond head, his thin, high-bridged nose and winning smile. She hadn't been completely sure when she left her room. But she was sure, very sure now. She stood a little distance away from him.

"Nino, I've made a dreadful mistake," she started, without pre-arrangement. "I can't marry you—I really can't." Faced with his amazed, incredulous start, she faltered, "I don't think I'm ready to marry anyone yet, unless I were frightfully in love." Her voice trailed away.

"But you are in love with me," he cried jumping up. "Not enough," Marie stepped from the reach of his arms. "You are tired. You do not know what you are saying," he told her. His expression was changing to one she had never seen before.

"There's no use saying I'm sorry, Nino," she murmured sadly. "I can't see into the future. But it's the way I feel now." "You feel—you feel!" he repeated. The green lights in his eyes seemed to tinge his skin. He was beginning to believe her. He drew himself up, advancing upon her. "You can't do this, Marie! You can't go back on your word." His voice had the ring of panic, more than of pain.

"Love isn't a matter of words," Marie spoke with greater coldness. For the first time, she remembered things that hadn't seemed to matter before: her youth, her money....

"What has changed you?" He appealed to her in such despair that she was touched. "We've been living in a make-believe world," she said gently. "Last night... I woke up." Lippi clenched his hands. He couldn't believe it; he couldn't accept it. This girl, Northheim had been forcing on him, had never looked so beautiful, so desirable. And if he lost her, he was lost. "Do you take me for a puppet?" he bitterly exclaimed. "Yesterday you loved me—today you do not love me. What was that to treat a man?"

"Isn't it better to be honest?" She returned. "It's for both our sakes." "Both our sakes?" he echoed with a groan, thinking of what Northheim would do when he heard. Her very ignorance of the star role she played in Northheim's schemes, increased Nino's terror for her—and himself. "Listen to me, Marie; give me a little time," he urged.

THANKS TO TONJON, PORTSMOUTH LADY ABLE TO ENJOY SPORTS AGAIN

Declares After using TONJON a short time she felt years younger. Stomach disorders and constipation soon disappeared. Now able to roller skate and help to paint the inside and outside of their home.

MRS. BERNICE WINTER

If through long suffering from constipation, with indigestion, lack of appetite and loss of sleep you have become a prey to so-called rheumatic aches, headaches and other symptoms, why not try TONJON and see why this wonderful medicine has helped so many other sufferers. TONJON may be able to help you just as it did Mrs. Bernice Winter, of 1402 Norfolk St., Portsmouth, Ohio, whose husband is a brakeman on the N. & W. Railroad. She states:

"Although I am a young housewife, ever since I was a school girl of 14 I have been troubled with constipation. During 14 long years I have found it necessary to take a laxative every other night. My appetite was poor and I suffered from many distressing stomach ailments. Gas would form immediately in my stomach and I was bothered with indigestion, heart fluttering, shortness of breath, heartburn, sourness and nausea. Bad breath, bad taste in my mouth and spots floating before my eyes bothered me quite often.

"Rheumatic pains seemed to be all over my body. Sharp pains in my back, arms, legs, back of my neck and stiff, sore joints and muscles caused me much untold misery the last few years. Due to the fact that I ached all over and was extremely nervous, I was unable to sleep like I should. I was troubled with a tired and weak feeling. To do my work was a burden as I didn't seem to have any pep at all.

"TONJON has been a grand health restorer to me. Just to show what this fine medicine did for me, I helped my husband paint the inside and outside of our home. I am now able to go out and roller skate with the best of them. I now feel years younger. If that isn't remarkable I would like to know what is."

There is only one way that you can learn more about the relief gained from TONJON, and that is to come in and talk to the TONJON Representative at the Broadway-Lease Drug Store, Salem, Ohio.
